Dear Princetonian,

Natural history riches. A marvel of modern engineering. This Journey combines a "get away from it all" sentiment with our 21st-century fascination with high technology to fulfill the needs of each side of your personality. Join your fellow Princetonians for this voyage through the historic Panama Canal, and to the rich rainforests of Costa Rica and Panama during the best time of year.

On this comprehensive itinerary, visit Costa Rica’s idyllic Isla Tortuga, named for its tortoise-like volcanic rock formations, as well as Panama’s ancient San Blas Islands, where the Guna people live much as they did centuries ago. Explore Panama and Costa Rica’s world-renowned national parks—rainforests, islands and archipelagos that foster one of the most pristine ecosystems on our planet. And cap off the experience with a daylight transit of the Panama Canal, an engineering marvel that has now been capturing the imagination for over one hundred years.

After one night on land in San José, board the privately chartered Le CHAMPLAIN, launching in 2018 and featuring the extraordinary Blue Eye, the world’s first multisensory observation lounge. This sophisticated small ship offers only 92 staterooms, each with a private balcony. Dock in small ports of call inaccessible to larger vessels and enjoy the advantages of five-star, small-ship cruising—elegant ocean-view accommodations, an exclusive itinerary carefully crafted with enriching excursions led by experienced onboard naturalists and attentive, personal service.

Princeton travelers will be joined on this Journey by those from other like-minded institutions. In order to confirm the place of your choosing, contact the Princeton Journeys team at (609) 258-8686 or journeys@princeton.edu today.

With kind regards,

Faculty Leader – Bonnie Bassler is a member of the National Academy of Sciences and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. She is a Howard Hughes Medical Institute Investigator and the Squibb Professor and Chair of the Department of Molecular Biology at Princeton University. The research in her laboratory focuses on the molecular mechanisms that bacteria use for intercellular communication. This process is called quorum sensing. Bassler’s research is paving the way to the development of novel therapies for combating bacteria by disrupting quorum-sensing-mediated communication.

Bassler is a passionate advocate for diversity in the sciences and she is actively involved in and committed to educating lay people in science. Dr. Bassler was awarded a MacArthur Foundation Fellowship in 2002. She was elected to the American Academy of Microbiology in 2002 and made a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 2004. She was the 2006 recipient of the American Society for Microbiology’s Eli Lilly Investigator Award for fundamental contributions to microbiological research. In 2008, Bassler received Princeton University’s President’s Award for Distinguished Teaching. In 2016, she was also elected to the National Academy of Medicine. She was a member of the National Science Board for six years and was nominated to that position by President Barack Obama. The Board oversees the NSF and prioritizes the nation’s research and educational activities in science, math and engineering.

On this journey Bassler will discuss the making of medicine from Costa Rica’s rainforest to your local pharmacy.

Called the “coast of riches” by the Spanish conquistadors who sought to colonize it following Columbus’s arrival in 1502, Costa Rica offers diverse and fascinating riches, from its impossibly fertile landscapes to the perseverant culture of its indigenous people. More than 25 percent of this captivating country is a national park, wildlife refuge or protected rainforest, earning Costa Rica the distinction of the greenest country in the world and the leading destination for eco-tourism. Explore lush rainforests, stroll coral-fringed beaches and encounter a vivid array of wildlife. The national motto of Costa Rica is “Pura vida!” which translates to “pure life”; it is expressed in the proud and welcoming faces of the ticos (Costa Rican natives), the passionate biologists captivated by the flourishing rare and endemic species, and the spectacularly vivacious landscape itself.

San José, Costa Rica
In the heart of the fertile Valle Central, Costa Rica’s dynamic capital city of San José possesses an eclectic mix of museums, landscaped parks, lively cafés and art galleries and an interesting fusion of architectural styles including Spanish Colonial, Moorish and Modernist. Visit the National Theater, a regal Baroque edifice modeled on Milan’s La Scala, with marble staircases, gilded statues and red velvet carpeting, and peruse the National Museum’s impressive pre-Columbian Central American artifacts, stonework, gold jewelry and statuettes.

Curú National Wildlife Refuge
Unlike traditional nature reserves, Curú Wildlife Refuge is a unique blend of sustainable agriculture, forest management and wildlife protection, reestablishing species like the scarlet macaw and spider monkey, both reintroduced into the wild here. Encompassing five distinctive untouched habitats—including mangrove swamps and both dry and humid forests—it is the ideal place to see the intricacies of interdependent ecosystems.

San Blas Islands
Located on the Caribbean side of Panama, the sun-drenched San Blas Islands are a living testament to Panama’s indigenous Guna people, also known as the Kuna, and their centuries-old language, customs and culture. Villagers live in typical thatched-roof huts, barter or trade in fish and agricultural products, and paddle dugout canoes, their main mode of transport.

Panama City’s Casco Antiguo, settled in 1673, showcases a blend of Spanish, French and Italian colonial architecture. of transportation. Guna women continue to hand stitch traditional colorful molas (reverse appliqué panels) and wear winis, long strings of tiny beads wrapped around their forearms and legs in striking geometric patterns.

The pristine, turquoise waters of Golfo de San Blas—populated with untouched coral reefs and vibrant marine life—offer an opportunity for swimming.

Panama's Guna people proudly wear vibrant molas and wrap their legs with beaded winis.

The $80-foot-long SS Kroonland was the largest passenger ship of its time to transit the Panama Canal in 1915.

During a daylight passage, experience firsthand the “greatest liberty man has ever taken with nature,” which cuts through the Great Continental Divide, spans 50 miles and took 33 years and 100,000 laborers to complete at a cost of $400 million. This historic engineering feat changed the world, opened new channels of international trade and allowed ships to travel between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans in a fraction of the time it took to circumnavigate South America.

After France’s failed attempt to build a sea-level canal here in the 19th century, and following the U.S. involvement in Panama’s independence, the project resumed under the watchful eye of President Theodore Roosevelt. When completed in 1914, the Panama Canal was considered one of the Seven Wonders of the Modern World. Now, more than a century later, the canal has undergone a $5.25 billion expansion to accommodate more than twice the cargo, maintaining its status as the “gateway to the world.”

Tens of thousands of workers labored and sacrificed to complete the largest engineering endeavor of the early 20th century.
